SCARLET FEVER.

This disease is feared more than most any of the other communicable diseases by the physicians as well as the people, and probably rightly so. This is because it has many complications giving rise to a high death rate or continued sickness, especially from kidney, lung and ear troubles, and because there is no vaccine or serum to combat it as yet like they have in smallpox, diphtheria, meningitis and other diseases. A preventative serum has been used of late with some good results, but it is too early to predict its Scarlet fever comes on quite suddenly with a chill, fever and sore throat, and usually the patients are real sick. A few days later a red rash comes out all over the body. These cases should be isolated at once in a room and only the attendant allowed to enter. It is communicated easily, giving rise to epidemics, especially in the fall and the first of the year, probably due to the gathering of school children after vacations.

The average case is easily told, but there are many cases in which the patient is not very sick, shows little if any rash, but has sort throat as its worst symptom. These are the dangerous cases to public health, as they go about undiscovered spreading the disease.

School inspection is of great value in preventing scarlet fever, as cases can be discovered early and quarantined before the danger stage of catching it arrives. This stage is during the eruption and into the so-called peeling stage. It is necessary to keep this quarantine from hecessary to keep this quarantine from three to six weeks—the longer the better. Afterwards the room should be thorough-ly cleaned and aired. All cases of sore throat should be seen by a doctor early.
